NTM Lecture Series for Providers – April 25 – 26, 2024

NTM Lecture Series for Patients and Families - April 27, 2024

About The Meeting: Nontuberculous mycobacteria (NTM) are ubiquitous in our environment. The clinical manifestations include but are not limited to chronic pulmonary infection, lymphadenitis, disseminated disease or skin and soft tissue infection. As we watch the incidence of tuberculosis drop to historically low numbers, the rates of infection due to NTM are increasing. These infections are underrecognized and cause significant morbidity and mortality. Treatment options are arduous but with the right tools, patients will improve clinically. We will have experts from across the country here to discuss this growing medical challenge. Come join us for an invaluable educational experience.

Exhibiting provides the opportunity to network and have meaningful conversations with NTM specialists and patients showcasing your products and building relationships that have impact.
