

Charity Party at VILLA-O Honors Candy and Ike Brown and Benefits National Jewish Health

MAY 01, 2010

Denver, CO — The first-ever Bella Sera evening in Dallas, a fundraising cocktail party on May 5 at VILLA-O, honors Candy and Ike Brown and raises money to fund the world-renowned, nonprofit National Jewish Health. National Jewish Health, a leader in the treatment of patients with respiratory, cardiac, immune and related disorders, and in groundbreaking medical research, provides preeminent care for patients throughout the country, including 940 Texans in the last three years. In addition to directly caring for Texas patients, National Jewish Health physicians last year provided expert advice to 214 Texas physicians on their patients, and trained 67 former National Jewish Health fellows who now practice medicine in Texas.

WHAT: Bella Sera, a beautiful evening featuring cocktails and delicacies by Chef Vincenzo Indelicato. Entertainment by Hunter Sullivan.

WHO: Bella Sera honors Candy and Ike Brown, Dallas philanthropists and business leaders. Co-chairs of the evening event are Rozalyn and Robert Colombo, Pat and Paul Fulchino, Debbie and Eric Green, Laurie and Todd Platt and Barbara and Sheldon Stein.
