

Kunsberg Classic Benefits School for Chronically Ill Children

Event Features Exclusive Dinner at Shanahan's and Day of Golf at The Sanctuary

AUGUST 07, 2011

DENVER —

WHAT: The 2011 National Jewish Health Kunsberg Classic is a day of golf at The Sanctuary to raise funds for Kunsberg School, a free day school at National Jewish Health for about 90 chronically ill students in kindergarten through eighth grade. It includes a private dinner at Shanahan's the evening before the golf tournament and is presented by RE/MAX LLC and sponsored by Shanahan's.

WHERE/WHEN: Private dinner for National Jewish Health Kunsberg Classic participants

Sunday, Aug. 7, 2011, at 6 p.m.

Shanahan's

5085 South Syracuse Street in Denver

Golf tournament

Monday, Aug. 8, 2011, at 9:30 a.m.

The Sanctuary

7549 Daniels Park Road in Sedalia

WHO: National Jewish Health Kunsberg Classic Co-Chairs Eddie Robinson and Marc Steron, and committee members including Paulette Brody, Stanton Dodge, David Engleberg, Josh Hanfling, Michael Harms, Steve Kris, Brian Parks, Lots Pook, Scott Robinson and Meyer Saltzman.

WHY: Kunsberg School provides a safe, friendly and healthy school environment for children with chronic illnesses, including severe asthma and allergies, sickle cell anemia, diabetes, HIV, AIDS, and other respiratory, cardiac, immune and related disorders. The students, many of whom have fallen behind their peers in school, receive care and learn to manage their illnesses from three nurses and National Jewish Health pediatricians. They benefit from small classes led by teachers with advanced degrees who use the latest educational technology tools.

Funds raised at the National Jewish Health Kunsberg Classic will go directly to the school, which is mostly supported through donations to National Jewish Health. National Jewish Health is known worldwide for the treatment of patients with respiratory, cardiac, immune and related disorders, and for groundbreaking medical research.
