DENVER —

Event Benefits National Jewish Health, Nation's #1 Respiratory Hospital

More than 700 business leaders will gather for the 36th Annual Financial Industries Dinner on March 12. Proceeds from the event will benefit the nation's number one respiratory hospital, National Jewish Health. The dinner will honor Craig Stillwagon, PNC Business Credit executive vice president and Eastern division executive. Stillwagon is a leader in the financial industry.

The dinner's honorary chair is Joseph Pollicino Jr., senior vice president and regional manager of Wells Fargo Bank N.A., who was also the 2012 honoree. The chair is Charles Garoklanian, senior vice president and Northeast manager at PNC Business Credit. Serving as treasurer is Sara V. Traberman, senior vice president at PNC Bank.

At the event, Barry A. Kastner, executive vice president of Keltic Financial Services and 2011 Financial Industries Dinner honoree, will be inducted into the National Jewish Health Council of National Trustees. The council comprises more than 200 community and business leaders across the country who work to raise awareness and support for National Jewish Health in Denver, Colo.

The Financial Industries Dinner was first held in 1977 and has become one of the most prestigious philanthropic events for New York's financial industry.
