FEBRUARY 12, 2015

DENVER, CO — A Wickedly Beaux Arts Ball will feature witches, wands and magic while benefiting National Jewish Health on February 21, 2015, at the Hyatt Regency Denver at Colorado Convention Center. Presented by the Morgridge Family Foundation, the event will honor Grand Marshals Lindsey and Stanton Dodge, Dianne Eddolls and Glenn Jones, Leslie and Noel Ginsburg, and Elaine and Kevin Kauffman.

The decade's most celebrated musical, "Wicked," will inspire the celebration, with musicians, singers, and dancers from Vali Entertainment performing against the backdrop of stunning décor by Design Works.

One of the year's most highly anticipated social events, the Beaux Arts Ball draws more than 1,100 guests and raises millions of dollars each year to support the world renowned research, care and education at National Jewish Health, the nation's leading respiratory hospital.

In addition to dancing, dining and casting spells, attendees at A Wickedly Beaux Arts Ball will bid for luxury packages that include viewing the 2016 Academy Awards with Elton John, vacationing at a luxurious 16th century Tuscan estate, experiencing the USA Pro Challenge cycling race up close and personal, and driving exotic sports cars at the High Plains Raceway. In addition, The Fund-a-Need auction will raise funds to support the hospital's pediatric programs for atopic dermatitis and allergies.

Tickets to attend A Wickedly Beaux Arts Ball, presented by the Morgridge Family Foundation, start at $500, with sponsorships available for $5,000 to $100,000.
