MARCH 15, 2016

DENVER, CO — More than 1,200 guests will party to the music of rock ‘n’ roll legends at the National Jewish Health Beaux Arts Rock ‘n’ Roll Ball on Friday, March 19, 2016. The annual Beaux Arts Ball is presented by Morgridge Family Foundation and benefits care and research at National Jewish Health. This year’s gala will be a rocking salute to 60 years of anthems, ballads and everything in between.

Grand Marshals Libby Anschutz, Janie and David Eves, and Rebecca and Lewis Kling will be honored at the event, held at the Hyatt Regency Denver at Colorado Convention Center. Guests will be entertained by the special featured band Tracksuit Wedding, the brainchild of Anschutz and Ali Pashel Frankfurt and a “band on the move,” according to The Denver Post. Guests will also enjoy live dancers and performers, excellent cuisine and fun décor.

Live auction packages include VIP experiences at the Tribeca Film Festival and New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival, as well as a once-in-a-lifetime summer of concerts at Red Rocks, the Pepsi Center and the T-Mobile Arena in Las Vegas.

The Beaux Arts Ball is the largest fundraising event held in Denver to benefit National Jewish Health, the nation’s leading respiratory hospital. Each year the black-tie gala raises $2 million or more to benefit patients with respiratory, cardiac, immune and related diseases and to support groundbreaking research conducted at National Jewish Health. The event began in 1970 as the Denver Dinner.

The 2016 dinner co-chairs are Kelly Brough, Jackie and Jerome Davis, Lindsey and Stanton Dodge, Alissa and Will Frankfurt, and Penny and Jack TerHar.

Platinum-level sponsors are The Anschutz Foundation, Dependable Cleaners and Sage Hospitality.

Currently, the event is nearly sold out through both table sponsorships (starting at $5,000) and individual tickets ($500 per person).
