

Rheumatologist Dr. Liudmila Kastsianok Joins National Jewish Health

NOVEMBER 03, 2017

DENVER — Liudmila Kastsianok, MD, has joined the faculty at National Jewish Health in the Division of Rheumatology. She comes to National Jewish Health after completing her fellowship at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Missouri. Dr. Kastsianok will see general rheumatology patients as well as those suffering from inflammatory myopathy diseases and spondyloarthropathies at the National Jewish Health main campus. Additionally, she is interested in using musculoskeletal ultrasound in diagnosis and management of the rheumatic diseases, and will conduct quality improvement research projects.

Dr. Kastsianok received her medical degree at the Belarusian State Medical University in Belarus and residency training at the St. Mary's Health Center in St. Louis. In addition to English, she is fluent in Russian and Belarusian.

National Jewish Health is the leading respiratory hospital in the nation. Founded 123 years ago as a nonprofit hospital, National Jewish Health today is the only facility in the world dedicated exclusively to groundbreaking medical research and treatment of patients with respiratory, cardiac, immune and related disorders. Patients and families come to National Jewish Health from around the world to receive cutting-edge, comprehensive, coordinated care. To learn more, visit the media resources page.

Media Contacts

Our team is available to arrange interviews, discuss events and story ideas.

Jessica Berry
303.398.1082
berryj@njhealth.org